

PORTIA CLUBS WORRIED BY WOOL

Members Discuss Prices and Schedule
K—Also Want to Know About
Woman's Domicile.

Schedule K's significance and the vagaries of wool prices from producer to consumer occupied the attention of the Portia Club part of the time at its meeting in the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon.

"I understand," said Mrs. Charles Hawkins, the president, "that the farmer only makes a profit of eight cents. I don't know whether that is the wool from one sheep or exactly what it is, but that is his profit; the wholesale dealer makes a profit, and the retail dealer makes from $2 to $3 on a $22 suit of clothes. That seems too much."

"But the tailor does not often seem like a very rich man, or the dealer who sells a poor one," objected a member from the floor.

Several members attempted to elucidate the problem by comments on wages in this and other countries and the use of machinery.

"As to machines," suggested a member, "I know you can buy an American sewing machine cheaper in Europe than you can here, where it is made."

It was decided that Portia should afford to give further time and attention to schedule K.

In answer to a question Miss Jeanette P. Baird took up the definition of domicile. The woman who wanted to vote was informed that she could establish her domicile wherever she pleased, but that she could vote only in one place when she could vote at all.

"When a man deserts his wife," explained Miss Baird, "she may take up her domicile with her father and he is bound to support her in the place she chooses."

This opened a discussion of rights in case of divorce.

"Will New York recognize a divorce obtained in Reno," and has there been an adjudication in such a case?" inquired a young woman, earnestly.

"No," began Miss Baird, but she was interrupted by a lawyer, who cited a case which has been made his health demands that he go South, can his wife, if she does not want to go South, establish a separate domicile and demand support?" was asked.

"Well, as I've had no experience, I hesitate to give an opinion," said Miss Baird.

"Better be an old maid," snapped a member from a corner.

It was decided that the matter of domicile is as worthy of Portia's further study as is schedule K.

WHAT WOMEN
FIND IN THE SHOPS

A gown that is attracting much attention at Macy's is one that, while it is designed primarily for a tea gown, is quite formal enough for dinner wear in the home. It is of cream grenadine over silk, with a square Paisley printed cape, and has dull green satin streamers. It is priced at $26.98.

A very suitable dress for the little girl to wear at school—one that can be worn in spring and fall as well as winter—is shown by James McCreary & Co. The dress is of a good quality blue serge and is neatly trimmed with a sailor collar and cuffs of satin. It is priced at $7.50.

With the coming of the spring rains every boy wants a good storm coat. A tan rubber coat, very appropriate for a boy of four or five years, may be seen at Hearn's, priced at $1.98 to $3.98, according to size. These prices prevail for Friday only.

A very handsome pair of women's boots, made of black leather, with a high, pointed toe, and a small heel, is shown by Alexander's, marked to sell for $2.50. Another pair, equally as stylish and marked at the same price was of patent leather with kid tops. These come in both button and lace.

Flannel pajamas for cold nights are appreciated by most men. Lord & Taylor are showing some very attractive patterns in a good quality cloth trimmed with silk frogs and buttons at the price of $1.50 the suit.

One of the latest fads for automobilists is to have their lap robes match or harmonize with the color scheme of their motor car. An imported motor robe of fine plush lined with broadcloth may be purchased at Gimbel Brothers in any color desired. The prices range from $15 to $40.

Self-striped white madras shirts are being worn to a great extent by fastidious dressers. Simpson-Crawford Company are showing some very exclusive patterns in this latest made shirt at 79 cents each or four shirts for $3.

There is an old saying that a traveler is known by the bag that he (or she) carries. Mark Cross shows a travelling bag that is very neat and attractive in appearance and which at the same time is spacious and of light weight. The bag is made of tan grained oiled with a moiré lining. It has a box bottom, which protects clothing and toilet articles, and is fitted with a lock and key and two side pockets. The bag comes in three lengths, sixteen inch, eighteen inch and twenty inch, which are priced at $12.50, $14.50 and $16.50, respectively. It may also be had in black leather.

A nightgown shown at Franklin Simon & Co.'s, which is both warm and at the same time not at all bulky, is made of crepe de Chine. The gown is hand embroidered, trimmed with real lace and beading, and is made in the kimono sleeve model. It sells for $8.75.

One of the new ideas for spring gowns is a French silk and wool vogue in a smart black and white striped effect. This material may be purchased at John Wanamaker's in a forty-six inch width at $12.95 a yard.

A handsome caracul coat, trimmed with ermine and lined with broadcloth, was noticed at J. M. Canning & Co.'s, priced at $150. Another coat at the same store which is attracting much favorable comment is a full length garment of Alaska seal, which is marked to sell for $600.

One of the dainty new models in party dresses for the young miss shown by Oppenheimer, Collins & Co. is a gown of embroidered net, with a single effect of white silk and insertions of Cluny lace. The dress is priced at $8.75.

Wadleigh High School Girls "Adopt" Three Little Motherless City Waifs

HELEN
WAIFS ADOPTED BY WADLEIGH GIRLS

Become the Fairy Godmothers of Children Abandoned by Their Parents—"Henry" Is to Have a Party on His Third Birthday Next Wednesday, and It Is Planned to Give Him the Finest Time in His Short Career.

Wadleigh High School girls are proving the most devoted of mothers to three little waifs who, before they were adopted by the warm-hearted pupils, were among the city's stray babies. Yesterday the girls started to plan for the birthday of one of the waifs, Henry, who at present is occupying a cot in St. Mary's Hospital for Children, where he is being treated for tonsil troubles. The girls sent a delegation to the State Charities' Aid Association headquarters in the United Charities Building to find out what Henry is most in need of.

"Henry will be there next Wednesday, and his foster mothers mean that he shall remember the day as the happiest in his career. When a Herald reporter looked as if a birthday party wouldn't do him a bit of harm. It was the hour when parents are permitted to visit the hospitals, and beside every small cot at least one mother was seated. Only Henry was motherless. That, however, is because visiting hour occurs during school hours. The Wadleigh girls are going to make it up to Henry on his birthday.

Besides Henry, the Wadleigh girls have adopted Jessie, aged eight, and Helen, who is Henry's sister, aged two. The girls pay Jessie's board at the home selected by the State Charities' Aid Association and also supply her with clothes and toys. Jessie is a bright little girl who stands well in her class at the public school. Her teachers make the best reports of her and her record during the last month has been that of second in her class.

Henry and Helen are also to live in a boarding home selected by the State Charities' Aid Association until they are in better health and fit to be offered to some family for permanent adoption. The Wadleigh girls do not pay the board of Henry and Helen, but they are their fairy godmothers in all other respects, taking the responsibility of their welfare, especially concerning their clothing and toys. The girls in which they think that real mothering should bring into the lives of all children. There are about one hundred of the girls in the "X" class of the high school, which has become interested in the adoption of children. The girls in this class, which is under the charge of Miss Henrietta Rodman, do special work which will fit them for taking an active part in the world or for making good home keepers should it be their lot to marry.

The girls who compose the "X" class are so pleased with their experiences in having adopted the three children whom they have adopted that they have notified the State Charities' Aid Association that as soon as Jessie, Helen and Henry have been adopted permanently they will take other waifs under their care. All three of these children have been given up by their own parents.

STARTS FAMILY WASH IN WIFE'S CROWDED PARLOR

West Virginia Man Routs, Woman Guests by Starting Move Designed to Nip His Better Half's Budding, Social Aspirations.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD.]
WHEELING, W. Va., Thursday.—Determined to put a crimp in his wife's ambition to become a social leader, Thomas Yingling, a wholesale butcher, who climbed up the sausage ladder link by link until he acquired a fortune, entered the drawing room of his home to-day while his wife was presiding over a card party, and, attaching a washing machine to the electric fixtures, proceeded to set a good example for the women present by doing the family washing.

Without waiting to remove the suits from their afternoon gowns the women fled from the place and left Mr. Yingling in full possession.

Some of those who delayed their departure said that it was a regular Yingling circus when Mrs. Yingling told her husband what she thought of his action. She retired to her room and late last night issued a bulletin announcing her intention of starting a wholesale butcher shop in opposition to her husband. This announcement was greeted with cheers by residents of this city, who see a chance to get meat at ridiculously low prices as a result of the Yingling differences.

The fact that he has prospered in business has not convinced Mr. Yingling that he should change his habits or his style of dress, the sartorial rock being the one on which the family harmony went to pieces. Mrs. Yingling was anxious to make social conquests, and to that end insisted that her husband put on his minstrel first part for dinner every evening. He protested that the sight of evening clothes took away his appetite, but she was obstinate and compelled him to get behind the marble top shirt when he came home from the abattoir.

Little by little she deprived him of all his former comforts. Any attempt to cross his legs was met with a stern rebuke, and he didn't dare put on his slippers before midnight. He had to surrender his pipe for gaily caparisoned cigars and occasionally has been seen trying to hide behind a cigarette. He stood it as long as possible, but when it was suggested that he carry his handkerchief in his sleeve he made a decided stand.

His wife has the members of the Euterpe Club at her home yesterday afternoon. The Euterpes were wondering who was going to win the first prize, an illustrated whitebrock holder. Foller, when Mrs. Yingling entered the room, towing a well filled clothes basket and the washing machine.

$1,800 A CUBIC INCH FOR SHAKESPEARE

Tiny Copy of "Venus and Adonis" Sells for $3,800 at Hoe Library Auction.

DAY'S RECEIPTS, $43,695

Manuscript Written by Sir Walter Scott Is Sold for $1,910 to
Dr. Rosenbach.

Chief of all the tomes sold yesterday in height of price at the sale of the library of the late Robert Hoe was a diminutive copy of Shakespeare's "Venus and Adonis," for which $3,800 was given by the irrepressible George D. Smith, after a struggle with Bernard Quaritch.

The total receipts for the afternoon and morning sessions of yesterday amounted to $43,695, of which the earlier one yielded $35,206 and the latter $18,489.50. This makes the total for Part II, $43,695.50. The receipts, including Part I, are $1,436,331.75 to date.

It was reported that the Shakespeare booklet was shortly to be transferred to the library of Henry C. Folger, a financier, who has already a large collection of the bard's early editions. This work is three and a half inches high, three and three-eighths wide and an eighth of an inch in thickness.

It has twenty-three leaves, each one of which is worth $165 at that rate. Its contents are a trifling more than two cubic inches, from which it may be seen that it is worth about $3,800 a cubic inch. There is said to be only one other like this and that is in the British Museum.

Some Shakespeare folios commanded good prices, although none reached in cost the altitudes of last spring, when those of Part I. of the great library went under the hammer. Mr. Smith was the buyer, at $2,600, of a very good third folio printed in 1664 in London.

Another high point was reached when Dr. Rosenbach, of Philadelphia, gave $1,910 for a manuscript of 400 pages of the "Life of Jonathan Swift," by Sir Walter Scott. The author wrote on both sides of the paper and with the leaves are many corrected proofs. This literary treasure was bound.

Words about witty Irishmen of long ago seem to be more really than the words of every Irishman of this modern day, as was shown by the fact that the original manuscript of G. Bernard Shaw's "Passion, Poison and Petrification," forty-one leaves, written in pencil, mostly, as attested by the author himself, on Green Northern express trains, sold for only $140, to the buyer of the Scott manuscript.

Dr. Martini acquired for $1,350 a first edition folio of "Rerum Venetarum," by Sabellius, illuminated in gold and colors and bearing the arms of a Duke of Venice. The highest price at the evening session was $2,500, given by Walter M. Hill, of Chicago, for Captain John Smith's "History of Virginia," a dedication copy of the great rarity.

John Skelton's "Colin Clout," a work much esteemed by collectors, went for $1,025 to Mr. Smith. This particular copy was "imprinted at London by me, Rycharde Kelle, dwelling in the powerty at the long shop under saynt Myldredes chyrche," and compiled by "Mayster Skelton, poetes Laureate."

Here is a list of books or lots which sold for $300 or more, giving first their authors, then the titles, the place and date of publication, the new owners and the prices paid:

Sabellius, "Rerum Venetarum," &c., Venice, 1487, Dr. Giuseppe Martini, $1,350.

Saint Graal, "L'Histoire du Saint Graal," Paris, 1516, Dr. Rosenbach, $1,000.

Saint Pierre, "Paul et Virginie," Paris, 1789, James F. Drake, $1,000.

Scott, Sir Walter, original manuscript of "Life of Jonathan Swift," 400 leaves, Dr. Rosenbach, $1,910.

Shakespeare, plays, second folio, London, 1623, George D. Smith, $3,800.

Shakespeare, plays, third folio, London, 1649, Mr. Smith, $2,600.

Shakespeare, "The Taming of the Shrew," quarto, London, 1600, Walter M. Hill, $600.

Shakespeare, "The Taming of the Shrew" (spurious play), first edition, London, 1607, Dr. Rosenbach, $1,000.

Shakespeare, "King Lear," second edition, London, 1608, Mr. Smith, $600.

Shakespeare, "Contention Between Lancaster and York," Mr. Smith, $500.

Shakespeare, "A Yorkshire Tragedy," 1619, Mr. Smith, $500.

Shakespeare, "Venus and Adonis," 1600, Edinburgh, 1827, Mr. Smith, $3,800.

Skelton, John, "Colin Clout," London, 1534, Mr. Smith, $1,025.

Smith, Captain John, "True Travels," London, 1630, Mr. Hill, $600.

Spenser, Edmund, "Fowle Hymnes," London, 1598, Mr. Smith, $500.

Steele, "Liberations of Isaac Blackstaff," Dr. Rosenbach, $1,000.

Surrey, "Songs and Sonnets," London, 1585, Mr. Smith, $250.

Terence, "Terence en français," &c., Paris, 1600, Mr. Quaritch, $800.

It was stated by the Anderson Auction Company that the two volumes of "Contes et Nouvelles" were evidently the ones referred to in the interview with Mons. Rahir of the Morgand firm in Paris as given in a special cable to the HERALD, published yesterday morning.

The management declared that Maurice Sloog had expressed his satisfaction with the price of $1,700, which he had paid, and that the volumes were for a New York amateur and not for Paris. They contain illustrations by Fraagonard. The sale of Part I. will be finished this evening.

Beginning in next Sunday's NEW YORK HERALD is "Chance," a new novel by Joseph Conrad. The author of stirring sea yarns has turned out another story of the deep that appeals strongly to women.
